

Peer Reviews (MVP)

Team Hacktrack: George Ezenna, Kairat Ashim, Eric Manzi, Favyen Bastani

Eric

For the MVP Eric handled the User model and everything associated with it (login and sign up). I was able to work very effectively with Eric because our schedules allowed us to meet pretty frequently to work. Eric was also very on top of the deadlines and requirements and did a good job in reminding the team of this. I think if Eric can maintain this and we continue to meet in person we will be very effective as a team.

Kairat

For the MVP Kairat handled the model and controller for projects, while I handled the view. Kairat also ended up delivering on everything he promised, the only difficulty was there were times we were working on the same file remotely and it would have been easier if we were able to work in the same location and discuss it but our schedules didn't permit it. Additionally we communicated over Messenger which was difficult which often resulted in confusion although we meant the same thing. Going forward I think we would be a more productive team if we could meet more frequently in person.

Favyen

For the MVP Favyen primarily worked on posting and commenting functionality. That is everything from the model of posts and comments from handling the interaction on the UI. He was able to deliver on everything he promised as expected and I didn't notice any errors. However I only noticed most of his contribution the last few days before the deadline that would've been worrisome if my work depended on his. Additionally there was some work with displaying comments that wasn't clear if it was allocated to me or Favyen but Favyen ended up delivering on.
