George

George did a great job with the user interface design. He put great effort in notifying the team when he changed something major. My only advice to George is to thoroughly cross-check the effects of the changes he makes in the css. We were all surprised by the awkward button alignment during the demo which was a result of a last minute change by George.

Kairat

Kairat was very prompt and his code was super clean. For the MVP, he finished all his work very early. However, after the MVP, he did not finish a major task (Project tests) before our team's deadline and did not notify the team about this. Even though he did finish his task before the class deadline, he could have avoided worrying the team by warning the team about his delay.

Favyen

Favyen did great work with the @mentioning and security. Favyen also did a great job adding modularity to our app by abstracting out the email functionality. Favyen, however, should have been more communicative that he was changing this because it took me a while to figure out what had happened to the (rather janky) email code I'd written.
